times chops, sometimes even a shoulder of lamb, and, looking at the buil for each of these dishes, contrasts it with what the 'best cut' of beef would be and congratulates herself that she has saved innone?

I do not want to dash her pride in her frugality, but the beef would have been more economical than any other of the substitutes she has selected. To be sure, the original price is perhaps twice that of the steak and much more than the chops or shaulder of lambfor a prime tib roast of beef leaves very little of, at 2 bill. But what has she left after one meal has been supplied by any one of the dishes that I have mentioned? There is, perhaps, a little bit of the tough end of the steak; good only to add to the stockpot or to put with some other cold fleak. For a stew or hash. There never is anything remaining of, a chop except the bone, and unless, like Kipling's poor hero, in. "The Light That Failed," one possesses a small dog who must be fed on "chopbones," even these will have to be thrown away. Of the shoulder of lamb, after a family of average size has dised from it, there are also bones. These may be converted by slow boiling into the foundation for a white broth or cream soup, but there is seldom enough meat left to turnish even a part of a second meal.

Not so with roast beef. For she who watches well the ways of her household can make much of this popular viend. When it is cut in the shop at which she buys it she will insist that her butcher remove the ribs and roil the meat, skewering or tying k into a sightly round. She will also demand that the ribe and bits of fat cut off-known in butcherly pariance as 'trimmings'—be sent home with the roast. The bones are then put list a pot with enough cold water to cover them, with a sited officing, carrot and turnip and a stake of celery, and set at the side of the range, where they will simmer slow-ly for some hours. After which sait and preper may be added, and when the "stock" thus made is chilled and skimmed of dil grease that rises to the surface to form the basis for a delicious beef broth, which may be thickened with barrier, rice or sago. "In the land of the Moose Bird" the story of a trip eleven hundred miles by camee and portage from the north shore of Lake Superior to Hudson's Bay, via the Albany river, forms the attractive features of the May issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor Limited, Wood-stock, Ontario. The narrater is Mr. W, J. Malone one of the many visitors from the States who finds in the wilds of Can-ada advantages, from a holiday point of view; impossible to point of view, impossible to obtain elsewhere. Mr. Mulonc's writing is full of life and vigor and his narration is brightened by accounts of incidents by no means usual even in exploration trips taken so far afield. The route taken, was one few white men, apart from Hud-son's Bay employees, have followed and the story is the followed and the story is the more interesting on that account. With such a good opening the reader is led on to the other articles and stories and in particular should attention be directed to the papers on Big Game Problems and the Destructiveness of Wolves. Accounts of western hunts are also good and should interest hunters in eastern and central

A Long Day's Work

Eighteen hours of work out of twenty-four should be the limit for any man, in any class of work, not only on account muscular exertion and failing strength but also because of strength but also because of failing brain power, the man losing his capacity to appreciate his surroundings and to direct his operations. Such is the substance of the opinion given by Dr. Francois de Martigny, chief surgeon of the Hotel Dieu, who in the case of Dame L. Broken Down Swins.

The breaking down of swine in the hind legs or all fours is a well known difficulty that farmers are obliged to contend with says the Farm Journal. Animals begin by showing weakness in the hind legs or a knucking over of the rear fettors; joints and it not given treatment soon become helpiess. It is believed to be due to the overfeeding soon of the bloophate supplying grains. The trouble is seen most frequently in brods soon of the hisporphate supplying grains. The trouble is seen most frequently in brods soon which exhaust this element in nourishing the fetus and sucking the young. It should be warded against by feeding the sow during pregnancy and while nursing on ground outs, bran and olimeal, with as much milk as possible.

With the first symptoms the following treatment should be begun, both milk as possible.

I have handled dairy cows for the last fifteen years and I am giad to say that I have never had any case of contagious abortion, whites a correspondent of the Country Geightenan. I have al-ways made it a practice at least twice a week all through the winter to mix up a gallon or so of warm water and some carboic dip solution, get a dandy brush and dip in mixture and give every cow and heifer in the barn a good soaking all around the tail nead and let it run down the tail. Do this in the middle of the day and there will be no danger of the dishifectant's flavoring the milk. I know of-three neighboring farms where this was done summer and winter, and for the present of a single case of abordion occurred a noing a total of 125 dairy cows.

The fashlon changes in dog collars not quite as often perhaps as in the clothes of the mistresses, but there are sharply defined rules concerning what is correct in canine collar adorament. The latest mode for these collars meat spring is a bright green leather, and on the right shade of dog the effect is remarkably, striking. Red collars meat spring is a bright green leather, and on the right shade of dog the effect is remarkably striking. Red collars are again in vogue for black coated doggeles, and there is a model in silver beads that is much approved. A favorite collar of a dog in the toy class owned by a belle living at the usitional capital is of brown leather hessed with silver salls. On the bangle which dangles from the collar are described tipe canine's name and address.

But the most curious dog collar on record was ordered by a Baltimore man to celebrate the eleventh birth-day of his favorite black and tan terrier Dixte. The collar is of discontinuity of the collars in the form of a than, with a pendant consisting of two graduated pieces higher in the center and narrowing at the back.

your waliable medicine," sate to-young man.
"So, it helped you, did it? I am very glad," said the doctor, smiling, "Indeed it helped me wonderfully," was the assuring reply. "How many bottles did you find it necessary to take?"
"Oh, I didn't take any of it; I in-duced my uncle to take one bottle and I am his sole heir."

The Wife—"I had all kinds of faith in my husband when I married him." The Maid—"And now?" The Wife—"Oh, I soon discovered that marriage was a great faith cure."
